University of South Carolina School of Medicine Columbia

The USC School of Medicine boasts a beautiful, historic campus and modern classrooms, labs and library facilities, which adjoin the Dorn VA Medical Center, one of the school's affiliate hospitals.

A distinguished core faculty of scientists, clinicians and practicing physicians brings outstanding academic training. This core faculty is complemented and enriched by a large number of community physicians who participate in both hospital clerkships and office preceptorships.

A major strength of the USC School of Medicine is the favorable faculty-student ratio, which allows close, personalized instruction and promotes valuable mentoring relationships. In the past decade, the school has emerged as a national leader in integrated ultrasound medical education.

Nearly 400 students are enrolled in the four-year MD program, which is fully accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education of the Association of American Medical Colleges. In addition, the school offers graduate programs in biomedical science, genetic counseling, nurse anesthesia, physician assistant studies, psychiatric rehabilitation and rehabilitation counseling.

Clinical departments are located on the campuses of the school's major affiliate hospitals, Prisma Health Richland Hospital, Carolinas Medical Center, McLeod Regional Medical Center, and the Dorn VA Medical Center. Additionally, several facilities of the SC Department of Mental Health serve as host sites for clinical rotations. Through the Prisma Health-USC Medical Group—which is comprised of more than 1000 physicians and advanced care providers—and its affiliate hospitals, the School of Medicine fulfills its mission of serving the people of South Carolina and beyond through exemplary medical and health education, transformative research and compassionate patient care.

In addition to the residency programs affiliated with Prisma Health—Midlands, the USC School of Medicine offers a fellowship in primary care ultrasound.
